This book examines a new topic in Human Resource Management (HRM), green - or environmental - HRM, analysing the role humans play in environmental management at work and environmental behaviours at workplaces around the world. The book begins with a focus on negative workplace green behaviours (e.g. toxic chemical leaks, air pollution, contaminated waste etc.), and what such environmental problems mean for workers, managers and society as a whole. This book outlines relevant, underpinning academic theory and research literature on how HRM is 'going green', and details real-life organisational examples derived from original and secondary empirical research to illuminate the implications of adopting Green HRM practices for relevant stakeholders. From the Preface: The major objective of this monograph is to provide a critical overview of risk assessment in accounting and auditing. Many of the intellectual roots of the treatment of uncertainty and risk in accounting can be found in other disciplines. The monograph, therefore, attempts to synthesize conceptual frameworks, and empirical findings from a variety of disciplines and relate them to developments in risk assessment in accounting. The conceptual framework which is developed should be useful for both practitioners and academics who would like to employ a broader perspective in viewing their own work in the field.
